

GENERATION HOMES

Cora Johnston

KNOWN FOR: Building and designing coastal homes in a variety of price points with quality materials and ease of upkeep that finish within each owners budget.

What type of experience can we expect from your business? A lasting relationship with your home builder that neither you, your family, friends or co-workers have ever experienced before.

Tell us about your business. We are a small family owned and operated building company. Much like most families today, we are very blended, meaning we are not all related, however, we work together as one rather than as individuals. We do this by having respect for one another and communicating constantly throughout each day. Every one of us has a passion for building homes that our owners love and are proud to live in.

What motivates you in the workplace? New ideas is what motivates all of us. We become excited when a new idea or challenge is presented to one of us. We collectively work as a team to research, evaluate and implement new ideas into our company and the homes we build.

What do you consider to be your specialties? We strive to have cohesive and interior designed homes that are unique, even when a home comes to us already designed, it is our job to interpret the intent of the owner and architect and we build it with the integrity as it was designed.

What is your competitive advantage? Not only do we all listen to our customers, we hear what they want. Every home built is as unique as the person or family we build for.
